

Criminology

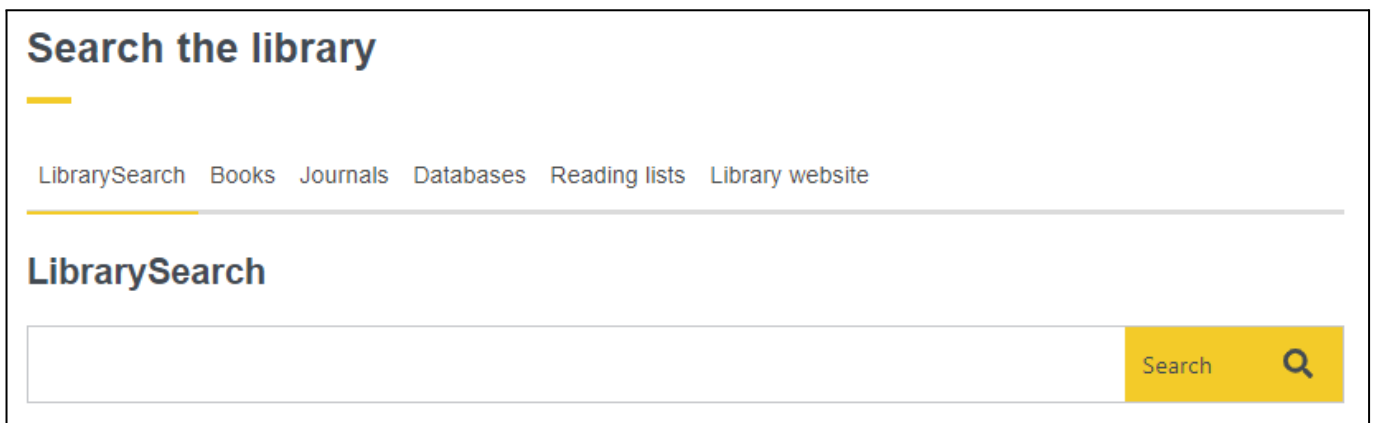

This guide will show you how to make the most of the library's print and digital resources. It will show you how these resources can help you with your criminology modules.

1. Your librarian

Your Academic Liaison Librarian is Charlie Brampton. You can contact Charlie at any point in your course if you would like help with finding the books you need, researching a topic for an assignment or using the library's online journals, ebooks and databases. She's based in the Headington Library and her contact details are at the end of this guide.

2. Searching the library's collections

The library homepage is at www.brookes.ac.uk/library and this is always the best place to start. Use the "search the library" box on this page to search for resources available on the library shelves and online. Just select the tab that best describes what you're searching for, type your search words in the search box and click search.

The screenshot shows the library search interface. At the top, it says "Search the library" with a yellow underline. Below this are navigation tabs: "LibrarySearch" (highlighted with a yellow underline), "Books", "Journals", "Databases", "Reading lists", and "Library website". Below the tabs is a search box with the text "LibrarySearch" above it. The search box is empty and has a yellow button with the text "Search" and a magnifying glass icon to its right.

3. Reading lists

You can find the reading list for any module by typing the module name or number in the "reading list" tab of the search box on the library homepage (shown above). If you go to one of your modules on Moodle, you will also find its reading list there. Just look under "key resources" in any module.

Learn more about using reading lists to quickly access what you've been asked to read.

4. Seeing what books and ebooks you have access to Use the Books search tab in the “search the library” box on the library homepage. The results page will show you if a book is available and give you the call number (this shows where it’s shelved). You can click on the book title and click “place hold” if you want to request items which are on loan to someone else, or held at another Brookes library.

Ebooks are also shown in the search results. Click on the “view ebook” button to access an ebook. You may need to log in with your Brookes student number and password when prompted. Our ebooks are on a variety of platforms so options for viewing, downloading and printing will vary. Just ask us if you need any help with ebooks.

Go to the criminology page on the library website for more help and ideas.

5. Where are the criminology books in Headington library?

Click on a book’s title on a reading list or LibrarySearch to see its call number. For criminology, these are usually in the 360s, for example: 364.089 MAR.

Books with call numbers in the 360s are found on level 2 of Headington library. You can download a library map or pick one up from the Welcome Desk on level 1. On the landing of each floor, you will also see a map of that floor. Books are shelved next to other books on the same or similar topics.

Learn more about finding criminology materials in Headington library.

6. Journals and journal articles

Journals provide one of the best sources of information on current research and discussion. The library subscribes to a wide range of journals in criminology and related subjects. Find out more about why journal articles are so useful in criminology.

Almost all of the journals that we subscribe to are available digitally, and you do not need to be in the library to access them.

Start by looking at your module reading list as that will show you any journal articles that the module leader recommends. If it helps to see a shorter list, you can click on ‘type’ at the top of the list then ‘article’ to see just journal articles. Click on the ‘view online’ button next to any article to go straight to it.

a) Browsing a journal

You may know the name of a recommended journal in an area of criminology, but not have a particular article in mind. You can browse that journal to see what articles are in there and what’s been most recently published.

Go to the “search the library” box on the library homepage, select the “journals” tab and type in the name of the journal.

Once in a journal you can browse through all the available articles, see the most recent articles and also search for specific topics or authors.

You can also use BrowZine to browse through journals, either via their website or using the BrowZine app. Learn more about BrowZine and how it works.

b) Finding a specific article

You may have a reference to a specific article, perhaps from the references at the end of a textbook chapter, e.g.

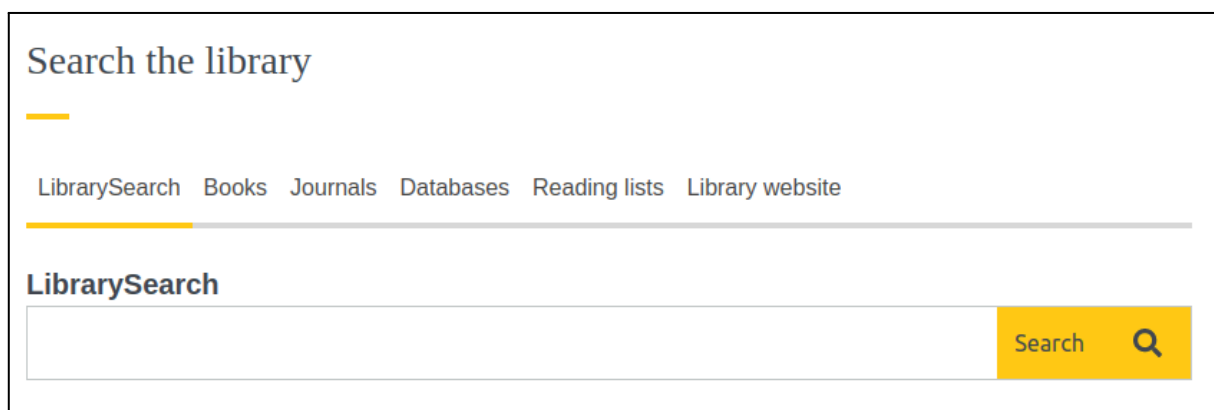

Huber, A. (2023) 'Image-based sexual abuse: online communities and the broader misogynistic landscape', British Journal of Criminology, 63(4), pp. 967-983. Available at: <https://doi.org/10.1093/bjc/azac067>

Firstly, go to the "LibrarySearch" tab of the search box on the library homepage and type or paste in the title of the article. In this example the title is "Image-based sexual abuse: online communities and the broader misogynistic landscape". Double check that the authors and journal title in any result match what you're looking for. If so, click on the 'view full text' or 'view PDF' button to go to the article itself.

If you can't find it this way, try using the "journals" tab of the library search box to look for the name of the journal. In this example, the name of the journal is "British Journal of Criminology." Once in the journal, you can navigate to the right year or search for the article title.

7. Researching a topic

A good way to start is to search for your topic in LibrarySearch:

If you want to go further, you should use one of our databases. Databases are tools that allow you to research a topic and find good-quality academic materials written about it. Some suggestions are listed below. Follow the links below, or access them (and some others) from the criminology page of the library website.

- HeinOnline: This includes a large collection of full-text journals, with a section dedicated to criminal justice and criminology. Note that this is an American database so many of the journals are US-centric.
- Academic Search Complete: This database searches across a number of disciplines at once. It allows you to create very specific precise searches but you can also just use the top search box to do a quick search.

Watch this video to learn about choosing good search words.

8. Finding newspaper articles, TV and radio programmes

To find newspaper articles, try using Lexis+ for UK newspapers or Factiva for international newspapers.

Follow this step-by-step guide to learn how to find UK newspaper articles using Lexis+
Learn more about using Factiva

Box of Broadcasts is a useful collection of UK TV and radio programmes. You can make your own playlists of programmes and/or clips within Box of Broadcasts.

9. Statistics

A wide range of authoritative and current statistics is available online. Our statistics page will give you some ideas of where to look to find statistics on different topics.

Learn how to find accurate and up-to-date police and crime statistics.

Statista aggregates data from a range of sources and presents in a very clear, easy-to-read format. Keep an eye on both the source and the date of any data that you find on Statista, as this can be variable. You may be interested in their statistics on crime in the UK and their statistics on drug use in the UK.

10. Referencing using the Brookes Harvard style

Citing your sources - also called referencing - is an essential part of your academic work, and demonstrates academic integrity. For criminology modules, you need to use the Harvard referencing system in your coursework.

Look at the Harvard resources on the criminology page of the library website to learn more about using Harvard referencing in your coursework.

11. Beyond Brookes

When doing in-depth research, for example for your dissertation, you are likely to come across references to publications which are not held at Oxford Brookes Library. Options for reading these sources include:

- a) Interlibrary loans. This is where the library borrows a book or gets a scan of a journal article from another library on your behalf. Learn more about how to make an interlibrary loan request.
- b) SCONUL Access Scheme. You may want to use other UK university libraries (for instance if you are away from Oxford in the vacations or if you live some distance from Oxford Brookes). The SCONUL Access

Scheme allows you to apply to use other university libraries. Find out more about the SCONUL Access Scheme.

- c) Bodleian Libraries. Undergraduate students registered on a dissertation module, postgraduates, researchers and staff are entitled to apply to use the Bodleian Libraries at the University of Oxford. Find out more about accessing the Bodleian Libraries.

12. Getting more help and ideas

Maybe you're working on an assignment, but don't know how or where to find the best research materials. Maybe you've had some feedback on your coursework about the sources you've used or your referencing. Maybe you've read through this document but are still unsure how to get started.

Your Academic Liaison Librarian is here to help all criminology students and staff so get in touch using the details below:

Getting help and finding out more

More information and support can be found on the criminology page of the library website:

<https://www.brookes.ac.uk/library/resources-and-services/course-resource-help/criminology>

If you need any help with finding or using library resources for criminology, please contact Charlie Brampton, the Academic Liaison Librarian for Criminology:

Email: c.brampton@brookes.ac.uk
JHB 112, Headington Library, Oxford Brookes University