

PEOPLE'S PLANS

How local people and organisations have come together to fight for the future of their areas.

Since the 1960s a rich history has emerged of communities drawing up their own land-use plans, owning occupying and developing sites, initiating community projects and using arts and other forms of media to communicate ideas. But this history is often fragmented, hidden or forgotten. People's Plans aims to reveal these histories and spark debate about what they say to us about present day community place-shaping. Bringing together universities, community groups, artists, planning groups and archivists, People's Plans is an Arts and Humanities Research Council funded research project.
