

Worgan, T. (2013). Hope theory in coaching: How clients respond to interventions based on Snyder's theory of hope. International Journal of Evidence Based Coaching and Mentoring, Special Issue 7, 100-114. Available at: <https://radar.brookes.ac.uk/radar/items/f1de7d96-f067-4701-849d-2c7c5cc48a21/1/>.

Zimmermann, L. C. & Antoni, C. H. (2020). Activating clients' resources influences coaching satisfaction via occupational self-efficacy and satisfaction of needs. Zeitschrift für Arbeits-und Organisationspsychologie A&O, 64, 149-169. DOI: 10.1026/0932-4089/a000327.

About the author

Joanna Jarosz holds a PhD degree in Social Sciences at the University of Silesia (on Psychoeducational Role of Coaching in developing Emotional Intelligence and Well-Being) and ACC credentials with the International Coach Federation. Her scientific publications are mainly focused on Coaching and its impact on well-being and performance.