Dear Michael,

You suggested that I should let you have some ideas of the outstanding amounts that need paying and those that will also need to be paid. I therefore enclose a list of the bills that we have received and would be grateful if you could let me have a float of, say, £250.

I would appreciate your advice on what I should do about the short-list publishers. According to the Rules this year they should each contribute 'up to £100 towards co-operative advertising'. In fact, the amount of money spent on co-operative advertising was only £330, as one of the advertisements we took in The Bookseller never appeared because of a printers' strike. Should I therefore invoice the short-list publishers for £82 rather than £100 as it might be awkward if they demanded to know what money was spent on advertising?

Best wishes.

Yours,

Marilyn Edwards

P.S. I am expecting another bill from Prads which will be approximately £60 and another bill for advertising which will be approximately £60.
